

I think the do not call list is a wonderful way for people who do not want to be bothered incessantly by telemarketers to make known their intentions. It is very troublesome to have your phone ring during supper time by a telemarketer who's only job is to read a script and persuade you towards their unwanted product. By giving people the choice whether to receive these calls with the no call list is very reassuring as when their phone rings you no longer fear an unprofessional, and unwanted call. The telemarketers should be happy that people are on this list as it narrows the folks who genuinely are happy to receive offers via phone, and further targets their audience. Please keep the No call list, as it provides the public a great service to rid itself of unwanted interruptions to their daily lives.
